Your Legal Training Obligations

WHSC Training Services – Helping to Meet Your Legal Obligations and More

Ontario's Occupational Health & Safety Act (the Act) places significant legal duties on employers to train supervisors, joint health and safety committee (JHSC) members, health and safety representatives and workers.

In addition to general duties to provide information, instruction and supervision, health and safety law spells out many explicit legal training obligations for employers. These include training related to:

- WHMIS
- Fall Protection
- Confined Space Entry
- Violence and Harassment
- Mobile Equipment Operators
- JHSC Certification—Part I and II.

Many workplaces begin with all-important Certification Training. The Act requires establishment of a joint health and safety committee (JHSC) in most workplaces with 20 or more workers. Employers must also ensure one member representing workers and one representing management complete a two-step Certification Training process known as Basic Certification Training or Certification Part I and Workplace Hazard-Specific Training or Certification Part II.

And these significant training obligations are about to expand. The Ontario government has pledged to introduce a new regulation soon calling for mandatory health and safety awareness training for all workers and front-line supervisors. They have also pledged to mandate training for health and safety representatives in smaller workplaces.

The WHSC is a leading provider of Ontario's legally-mandated Certification Training. However, with more than 200 hazard, workplace and industry-specific training programs, the WHSC can help your workplace comply with all your training obligations. And you can be sure your workplace is getting the help it needs as we are recognized by Ontario health and safety law as the province's training centre specializing in occupational health and safety.

Training Needs Assessments

With years of experience, WHSC training service representatives can help assess all of your training needs, including mandatory training required by law. This free, no obligation service is available to workplaces in all sectors. (See below for booking details.)

Onsite WHSC Training

Experienced WHSC trainers are located in communities across Ontario. No matter your location the WHSC can deliver any of our training programs in your workplace. Onsite training allows you to coordinate delivery around your work schedules and eliminates the cost and time associated with traveling to offsite training locations.

Training Customization

WHSC can also customize our existing programs or develop new training unique to your workplace or sector. Among other things, programs tailored to your needs can address specific workplace hazards, controls, policies and practices.

Training Your Trainer

WHSC can train your own in-house trainer. This cost-effective option puts a qualified instructor in your workplace, leaving the nominal per participant fee for course materials as the only cost for training.

Scheduled Training

The WHSC also offers competitively priced, comprehensive training scheduled in more than 20 Ontario communities throughout the year. View these training options and register today. (See inside for more details.)
